

Q1: You're planning to go on holiday with a group of friends. You want to go for a long and difficult climb up a mountain, even though nobody else is remotely interested. Do you:-

- A. Repeatedly insist that it happens.
- B. Back down straight away.
- C. Ask what others would rather do instead.

Q2: When your friends tell you why they don't want to go climbing you feel:

- A. Relieved - you didn't really want the responsibility anyway.
- B. Frustrated and impatient.
- C. Pleased that they can speak their mind.

Q3: One of your friends now says that they want to go on a yacht one of the days. Do you:-

- A. Encourage discussion about the suggestion
- B. Point out that none of us has sailing experience and that it could be dangerous
- C. Say that it's a great idea, even though you don't like the sea.

Q4: You say that you agree to go on the yacht trip ...

- A. But you've decided that you won't actually go.
- B. Even though you don't want to, and you will keep quiet and go.
- C. You decide to find out more about being safe on the water.

Q5: On the holiday you go to what is, for you, a favourite town. You discuss where to have dinner. Do you:-

- A. Say that you must go to restaurant X – because that's where you always go in this town.
- B. Not mention restaurant X, because a change might be a good thing.
- C. Mention restaurant X and see what people think.
